

The FCC's purpose is to serve the public interest, not those of the bullying corporate media moguls.

This is a matter of the meaning of Americanism, i.e. "e pluribus unum." Perhaps the FCC needs a basic lesson in principles of civil liberties and how we work to defend and to preserve freedoms in America. We should attend to a feature of "pluribus" (not us but a next generation of meek inheritors). There's far too much commercialism and commercialization, too much mediocrity and lack of diverse perspectives. Consolidation policies would weaken American values.

I suggest that you review a few website links, and think more carefully about whether you leave this planet with an improvement, or had made things worse:

<http://fp.enter.net/~haney/liberalism.htm>
<http://fp.enter.net/~haney/mediaownership.htm>

- regards
- jb